“Should I be washing my lashes at home between fills? Am I even allowed to get my lashes wet?”

These are questions all lash-wearers have at some point. Not only should your tech be washing your lashes before EVERY service, but you should also be washing them at home, daily. When you wear lashes, you are crowding your natural lash line. This means that you need to take extra precautions to make sure that area stays clean.

There are things like environmental debris, blepharitis, sebaceous secretions, and lash mites that can get into the lashes. Trust me, you'd much rather wash them once a day than deal with the consequences of those! Washing your lashes with something as simple as diluted baby shampoo will not only keep them clean, but also improve your lash retention. Cleaning lashes is especially important if you like to indulge in eyeliner or a creamy shadow for a night out.

The time of day you choose to wash your lashes can matter too! There are some circumstances in which washing them only in the morning or at night isn't what's best. For instance, you are much better off washing them after a workout, after doing yard work, or after a day at the beach. In these situations, it is better to get the debris and bacteria out right away.
